

Abstract

This bachelor thesis The Masaryks: father Thomas Garrigue and son John (1918 - 1925) is focus on the analysis and interpretation of the relationship between the father and the son in the period from the election of T. G. Masaryk the President of Czechoslovakia to the death of Masaryk's wife Charlotte, when J. Masaryk became an ambassador in London. The aim of the work is an evaluation of a dynamic period after the World War I and the introduction of personal and professional relationship between the two men entering the high politics of the young state. T. G. Masaryk became the President in 1918, J. Masaryk about the same time the diplomat of the young republic, chargé d'affaires in Washington and the private secretary of the Minister of Foreign Affairs E. Benes, but they still remain father and son.
